

South Carolina's Targeted Support and Improvement Schools 2020-21

Additional Targeted Support and Improvement Schools (ATSI) schools are defined as any school with one or more subgroup of students performing at or below the 5th percentile of all schools in the state. ATSI schools with low-performing subgroups are identified every three years, in alignment with the state's interim targets cycles. Each school will receive federal school improvement funds and receive technical assistance and support via professional development from relevant department of education offices.
