Definition of Service-Learning

- Service-learning involves students in community service activities and applies the experience to personal and academic development.
- Service-learning occurs when there is "a balance between learning goals and service outcomes" (Furco 3). Service-learning differs from internship experience or volunteer work in its "intention to equally benefit the provider and the recipient of the service as well as to ensure equal focus on both the service being provided and the learning that is occurring" (Furco 5).
- Service-learning course objectives are linked to real community needs that are designed in cooperation with community partners and service recipients.
- In service-learning, course materials inform student service and service informs academic dialogue and comprehension.
- Service-learning engages students in a three-part process: classroom preparation through explanation and analysis of theories and ideas; service activity that emerges from and informs classroom context; and structured reflection tying service experience back to specific learning goals. Students' Historians

- Dent Middle School students' historians present African American History by examining artifacts and documents that were provided by Historians, Ms. Rebekah Dobrasko and Mr. Don Stewart, from The SC Department of Archives and History. Career Specialist Joyce Simons, partnered with Richland District Two's Social Studies Coordinator, Ms. Emily Manigault to develop an innovative African American History Month student activity and exploration of the careers of historians.
- Contact was made with Ms. Dobrasko at The SC Department of Archives and History, who was very delighted to partner with Dent Middle School. We shared our thoughts, collaborated and everything came together to develop a lesson plan focusing on students as historians.
- Ms. Dobrasko and Mr. Stewart presented the significance of The SC Department Archives, how to do family genealogy, artifacts and copies of historical documents from 1800s to present day. They also share the various career fields of historians. After their innovative presentations, students were placed into groups of four and were assigned artifacts and documents to analyze and present their views of the relevance of their articles to African Americans.
- Each group was permitted time to examine their designated articles. After their assessments and group collaborations the students began their group presentations. Their groups were very enthusiastic as they presented historians views.
- One of the articles that impressed students the most was the petition of Briggs v Elliot that was filed in Clarendon County, SC, 1947 by a group of African American parents. Briggs v Elliot became a part of the landmark case Brown v Board of Education that changed the course of history. Learn more about your history by partnering or visiting The SC Department of Archives & History. They are magnificent educational partners.
- The lesson concluded with career specialist Joyce Simons sharing her personal story of attending segregated schools in South Carolina and graduating from a predominantly white school because of force busing. Military Guest Speaker

- A Wonderful Military Extended Learning Opportunity for Dent's AVID, 7th Grade and 8th Grade Students
- Career Specialist Joyce Simons extended an invitation to Brigadier General Arnold Gordon-Bray, Deputy Commanding General, of the United States Army Cadet Command, Fort Monroe to visit Dent Middle School in Richland School District Two. General Gordon-Bray graciously accepted the invitation and the planning for his visit began.
- On March 19, 2010, 7th grade AVID students were assembled in Dent's multipurpose room to have breakfast with the dignitary, hear his presentation, and ask questions to General Gordon-Bray. Dent's Principal, Dr. Randall R. Gary, along with the AVID teacher, Mrs. McKenzie, and 7th grade student, Alorah Bell, welcomed General Gordon-Bray to Dent. It was truly an awesome experience for the students attending breakfast to interact with The General, his staff Aide Cpt. Dolberry, and visiting officers Col. White and Cpt. Williams. The students enjoyed hearing the General's presentation, which explained his personal pathways to success and his experiences as a native of Columbia, South Carolina. Two of our supporting partners from Ft. Jackson, Ms. Vernetta Garcia and Ms. Martha Daniels came out to help serve breakfast to the students and the General.
- After breakfast, the General was introduced to the 8th grade student body by 8th grade Assistant Principal, Mr. Bobby Cunningham. The students gave the General an enthusiastic welcome – words cannot express the excitement in the gym exuding from the students. The General shared with the students about his South Carolina educational experiences and how they prepared him to achieve his career goals, including his journey to becoming a General in the United States Army. He devoted a considerable amount of time for the students to engage in interactive conversation with him. At the end of the assembly, students thanked the General for serving us in the military and giving his time to come to Dent to have interactive conversation with them. The teachers came and thanked the General for serving in Iraq for our freedom. The General was moved by the outward attentions and inward emotions of respect to him and his staff that were extended by the students, teachers, and administrators at Dent.
- The General returned to the multipurpose room and was introduced by 7th Assistant Principal, Dr. Juanita Henry. He then proceeded to engage in conversation with the rest of the 7th grade student body. As he presented and answered questions, the students were gracious and attentive. Three commonly asked questions throughout the day included the following: 1. Why did you join the military? 2. Are you really a General? 3. Have you been to Iraq or Afghanistan? The student also commented about the General's height.
- The day ended with the General having lunch with Principal, Dr. Randal R. Gary, Dr. Assistant Principal, Juanita Henry, Assistant Melissa Royalty, Assistant Principal, Mark Sims, Director of Guidance Ms. Evelyn Muldrow, 8th Grade Guidance Counselor, Mr. Fedrick Wilson 8th, Ms. Sherry Williams, SCSDE, and Career Specialist, Ms. Joyce Simons. During the luncheon, the General shared extended learning opportunities that the military can provide to schools and students (guest speaker, career fairs, scholarships in ROTC, Jr. ROTC and Jr. ROTC-Plus).
