REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT

SAT scores in Greenwood School District 50 are up at both high schools; our AYP data for No Child Left Behind shows our improvement rating is up from previous years; and the number of students passing the high school exit exam on the first try continues to rise. The 2007 – 2008 school year was the first for the students and teachers at Northside Middle School in a new state-of-the-art facility. Expansions and updates are also in progress at every school in our district. Among them are a 32-classroom addition at Greenwood High School, a new gymnasium at Emerald High School, and new art, P.E., and music rooms at several of our elementary schools.

District 50 is working to give every child choice in their education, and we are expanding the newly created Art, Communication, and Theater School to include elementary students. The Genesis Education Center offers educational programs across the spectrum, from dual credit courses that begin at 7 o'clock in the morning to Adult Ed classes that last well into the evening. The district has teamed with Piedmont Technical College to offer free college courses in five areas to students looking toward a trade when their high school days are done. And after a year of work, the new Greenwood School District 50 Child Development Center is set to open in the fall.

We recognize that it is important to move forward with clear goals, which is why District 50 participated this year in an Academic Audit. The audit made it possible to compare Greenwood District 50 with other school districts of similar demographic makeup. This audit showed that, overall, our District is doing well in our instructional programs and effectively educating our students. While we continue to make educational progress for our students, it is also important to make the community aware of this progress and of the importance education plays in the community as a whole.

We are diligently working with all district employees, students, parents, and the community as a whole, to make sure we are making positive changes. We all want to make Greenwood School District 50 a source of pride for our families and our community.

Darrell Johnson, Ed.D.
