Report of Principal and School Improvement Council

J. L. Mann High School's goals for the 2007-2008 school year were established with input from School Improvement Council members, the Student Achievement Leadership Team, and various subcommittees. The goal areas included: setting high expectations through literacy; providing a structured system of extra help; and involving students and parents in a guidance and advisement system. Through the school year, various subcommittees reviewed school progress on these goals. School-wide literacy efforts were researched, and a literacy plan for J. L. Mann students was created. This plan will be implemented next year, as we continue to work on this goal. Information was collected from all instructional staff about available extra help and posted for students and their families. The school-wide advisor/advisee program completed its second year of implementation this year, and we look forward to continuing this program next year.

The brand new J. L. Mann High School opened its doors on January 3, 2008. The 236,000 square foot facility gives students and teachers access to the latest in instructional technology, including Promethean Boards in every classroom, wireless laptop computers, a digital media production lab, and a computer-based language lab. The state-of-the-art auditorium highlights the school's fine arts department, and the athletic department has access to multiple practice and competition gyms. As the school district's special education satellite school, the new building includes automatic doors, a fully-equipped life skills lab, and adapted classroom furniture.

This year, J. L. Mann High School was recognized as a Parent Involvement School of Excellence by the National PTA. In addition, J. L. Mann received the PTA Award of Excellence in Communications, the Gold Leaf Award, the PTA Top Ten Membership Award, the PTA 1000 Member Club for having 1438 members, and our own Jeff Duncan, a Social Studies teacher, received the South Carolina PTA Outstanding Teacher of the Year Award. Spirit Week was very successful this year, with the students raising over $80,000 for charity. Newsweek Magazine listed J. L. Mann this year as school number 485 out of the nation's top high schools.

As we plan for next year, J. L. Mann will continue to offer a strong curriculum for all students and a variety of extracurricular activities, including an award-winning athletics program.
