Report of Principal and School Improvement Council

The 2010-2011 school year brought a renewed focus on recognizing that students at Lexington Middle School are individual learners and on responding to their needs appropriately. As the school now houses more than 1,400 students, faculty members worked with students to embrace their individuality, as they become capable, competent global citizens of the 21st century.

Building on the strategies that helped LMS meet Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) again in 2009-2010, faculty members continued to refine our Response to Intervention program. We created a data room where teachers could track student progress throughout the year. After using data to identify areas of strength and weakness, teachers worked with students in individual, small-group and whole-class instruction to target identified skill gaps and to extend learning. The "Zone" continued to be a place where students could complete missing assignments with the help of teachers. We instituted a "Boot Camp" program during the intervention block and paired students in danger of failing with a caring teacher-mentor who worked with them individually.

In addition to meeting AYP, the S.C. Department of Education once again recognized LMS as a Palmetto Gold Award winner after we received "excellent" absolute and growth ratings on the 2010 school report card. Although we are proud of these collective accomplishments of students and faculty members on our campus, we are equally proud of the individual accomplishments of students. Twenty-six students were recognized as Duke Talent Identification Program state finalists, and 81 students were named S.C. Junior Scholars. Six band and eight orchestra students were selected for region and all-state performance groups. The LMS Band received a "superior" rating at Concert Festival. Choral students received 10 "superior" ratings at Solo and Ensemble Festival, and both the choral and orchestra groups were awarded "excellent" ratings at their respective state festivals. Fifty-three students participated in the Tri-District Arts Consortium summer program this year. The Mock Trial team advanced to state competition based on their performance at regional competition.

Beyond the classroom, LMS students continued to learn to be global citizens who respond to others' needs with passion and determination. Students and faculty members raised more than $8,000 for Relay For Life, which benefits the American Cancer Society. Students also raised $4,280 to assist with Japanese earthquake relief efforts. Student leaders also organized the collection of food, clothing, toys and school supplies for various local charities.

As the world around them continues to change, faculty members, students, and supportive parents and community members are committed to working together to anticipate the skills that 21st century graduates need and strive to prepare students to step into the next stage of learning with confidence.
