REPORT OF PRINCIPAL AND SCHOOL
IMPROVEMENT COUNCIL

Lexington High School began the 2013-2014 school year differently than the previous year. With 1,300 fewer students than the year before because of the opening of River Bluff High School, the halls and classrooms were less crowded, and there were places to park. Teachers, trained over the summer with new strategies from “Capturing Kids’ Hearts,” greeted students at classroom doors with a handshake. We were off and running.

Change has been our challenge. One major change came with phased-in grading procedures to help students learn rigorous standards. This caused some stress for all stakeholders. To help this in the 2014-2015 school year, we plan to build in time during the school day for students to get extra help and retake tests.

Our students continued to excel academically, artistically and athletically. Students’ End-of-Course Exam passage rates were some of the best in the state. LHS once again received a Palmetto Gold Award for high academic achievement. Academic teams took wins locally and at the state level.

We won first place in the 2014 South Carolina Economics Challenge and took first, second and third places in the South Carolina State Finance Challenge. Our Odyssey of the Mind teams won state competitions.

Our artists and musicians garnered many awards. Our drama production won Best in the State and went to national competition. Band, chorus and orchestra placed students in All-State groups. An art student had her award-winning piece displayed in the Columbia Museum of Art. We added Dance to the Fine Arts Curriculum, and we are preparing for program growth next year.

Lexington High School took second in the Director’s Cup, the award for the best athletic programs in the state. Over the last four years, we have won the cup twice and finished second twice. We had seven Region Champion Teams this year, and two State Championship Teams (Competitive Cheerleaders and Girls Golf).

To take these awards after downsizing is a phenomenal tribute to our hardworking students, dedicated teachers, and supportive parents and community. LHS continues to thrive with a tradition of excellence!
